Work by Frederick J. Ripley, acclaimed photographer of American railroading, is on display at the Worthington Municipal Building through the end of March. This extensive exhibit of 30 dramatic enlargements, all 20" x 30" and framed under glass, colorfully and compellingly illustrate striking scenes in Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Iowa. Each piece is accompanied by a full-page caption. Ripley's work has been enthusiastically received in a wide variety of venues and locations, and framed pieces are in numerous public and private collections. Don't miss these fascinating images that engage with history, set in some of the most beautiful scenery of our country!
